PLAYER LEVEL FAQ

How levels work at Padel Logan

Why do player levels exist?

Levels keep matches fair and enjoyable. Put players of a similar standard together and the games flow, the rallies last, and everyone gets more out of the session.

Where do these levels come from?

They are aligned to the Padel Australia Player Rating Guide, so the level you play at here means the same thing elsewhere in Australian padel.

Do I need an official rating?

No. Read the descriptions in the Player Level Guide and pick the one that most closely matches how you play at the moment.

What are the levels?

Five: Beginner (1.0 – 1.5), Beginner + (1.5 – 2.0), Beginner ++ (2.0 – 2.5), Intermediate (3.0 – 3.5) and Intermediate Advanced (3.5 – 4.0).

Is this about excluding players?

No. Everyone belongs at Padel Logan. Levels are about matching people well, not keeping anyone out.

What if I am not sure which level I am?

Start at the level that best describes your current ability, or talk to one of our coaches. If you are regularly one of the strongest players in your group, it is probably time to move up.

Can I move up over time?

Yes, and we expect you to. Most players move between levels as their game develops.

What about Advanced players?

The Padel Australia guide continues past 4.0 into Advanced. There are fewer players at that standard right now, so we do not run a separate Advanced category.

So can Advanced players still play here?

Absolutely. Dedicated Advanced sessions may not always be running, but you are very welcome to book a court and organise matches against players of a similar standard.

Can I still organise a game with friends?

Of course. Levels apply to our organised sessions. Book a court and play with whoever you like.

Does my level change what I pay?

No. Court hire rates and membership benefits are the same whatever level you play at.
